

Girish Kasaravalli's son Apurva to make a film

National Award-winning director Girish Kasaravalli's son Apurva is all set to commence work on his first film. The movie, titled Niruttara, deals with the lives of four people in an urban setting. "This is a relationship drama about four people and their lives. It is a contemporary, urban story. I've cast Bhavana, Aindrita Ray and Kiran Srinivas. I'm in talks with Rahul Bose, for the fourth character," says Apurva.

Kiran, who is returning to Sandalwood with this project, says, "The script is what sold it to me. Apurva's been in touch with me for the past six months and I was very keen on doing this. This film is not something that will make you go wow; it is something that instead touches your heart. It reminded me of the kind of films I grew up watching, those of Ananth Nag, Shashikumar and Ramesh Aravind, which entertained, but also had soul."
